ABOUT PROGRAM

The basic techniques for managing projects — scheduling, budgeting and cost tracking — are well-known and available from many sources. But to become one of the best, your project staff must learn to think and act like business owners where their own money and success is at stake. FMI's Project Manager Academy is built around four core themes:

- Developing profitable customer relationships
- Creating powerful, integrated project teams
- Understanding financial control of projects
- Planning projects for profits and customer satisfaction

Throughout the experience, project managers and staff examine themselves, their organizations and their processes, learning how to transform themselves from talented builders into true project leaders.

DEVELOPED FOR

- Project managers
- Project engineers
- Assistant project managers
- Project executives
- Superintendents
- Assistant superintendents
- Field engineers
- Vice presidents of operations
- Chief operations officers

Companies often find great benefit in having several team members experience Project Manager Academy at the same time, because it can help build common knowledge and accountability among colleagues. PMA can also help graduates apply best practices across their organizations if more than one person has taken the training.

BENEFITS

Project Manager Academy is four days of intense, no-nonsense, total immersion into the business of construction that will fast-forward all attendees' career trajectories and contributions to their organizations. FMI's results-oriented approach transforms project managers into world-class project leaders, equipped with the business acumen as well as communication and leadership skills to own the outcomes of their projects. Throughout the program, project managers engage with their peers across the industry, opening their eyes to new methodologies and best practices.

Attendees become aware of the financial and relationship risk at stake on every job and their responsibility to lead projects to successful outcomes. In short, they gain the owner mindset.

For nearly 70 years, FMI has served the built environment as a trusted advisor. FMI's instructors are committed to bringing their talents, energy and passion to develop world-class project delivery experts in the construction industry. The faculty includes senior-level FMI staff, who possess both project and financial management knowledge and experience. Our instructors are highly respected consultants, authors and thought leaders in the construction industry.
